

CONTENTS

Introduction: How do we help the child to be creative and self-assured?	7
Chapter One: A look into art therapy	13
Chapter Two: “Scribbling,” drawing and self-esteem—how do they relate?	17
Chapter Three: The drawing, the “me” and the soul of the child: changing and evolving together	19
Chapter Four: From the doodle to the circle and on to drawing a figure	21
A. Doodling the beginning: ages one to three	21
B. A circle is born: ages two-and-a-half to three-and-a-half	30
C. The cross has come and, with it, complexity: ages three to four	42
D. This dot is me: ages three to four	49
E. The circle has grown horns: ages three to four	53
F. A base has appeared, here comes the triangle: ages four to five and up	57
Chapter Five: Can I now bring a figure to life?: ages four to six	61
Chapter Six: How to build a house—or a house isn’t only a square: ages four to five	73
Chapter Seven: All the colors of emotions—drawing with color	77
Chapter Eight: A private collection from doodling to drawing a figure—by a girl and a boy	98
Chapter Nine: From the doodle to the circle—a universal phenomenon	97
Chapter Ten: The soul, the doodle, and circles in adults	109
A. The circle within	112
B. From doodling to drawing a circle with horns	115
C. The circle and the meaning of life	118
D. “A triangle. Far more interesting than a circle.”	120
E. The cross that helped in choosing a path. Or even two.	123

F. A cross—should I climb up, or “go with the flow” and expand?	125
G. The cross—axis of fantasy and axis of grounding	131
H. The cross—When the “cosmic time” and the “human time” meet one another	132
I. “From the circle to my own house.”	134
J. The gaze that influenced a life story—from a feeling of missing out to a feeling of acceptance	144
Chapter Eleven: “Please Do Not Disturb—I’m drawing”.
Your toolbox (and some tips, too)	149
A. Place	151
B. Material	152
C. Diversity	152
Chapter Twelve: “Take a look at the drawing: it’s a body”. Drawing as an expression of the body	153
Chapter Thirteen: An activity for keepsake	165
Thanks	171
Bibliography	175
Art pieces	176