

Contents

Acknowledgements	v
Abbreviations	vi
Preface by Orna Raz	vii
Introduction	1
1 Characteristics of Women's Humour	13
1.1 Myth of Women's Lack of a Sense of Humour	13
1.2 Undermining Women's Wit	14
1.3 Women's Language and écriture féminine	17
1.4 Difference between Irony and Humour	30
1.5 Necessity of a Humour of One's Own	34
1.6 Humour: A Female Device?	36
1.7 Misreading Women's Humour and Images of Women	38
1.8 Lack of Ending in the Works of Women Writers	40
1.9 Differences between Conventional Humour and Women's Humour	42
1.10 Women's Humour and Socio-Cultural Restraints	47
1.11 Ideology of Domesticity and Domestic Comedy	49
1.12 Characteristics of Women's Humour	52
1.13 Major Areas and Tactics of Female Humour	57
1.14 Self-Irony	59
1.15 Women Writers' Humour in the Nineteenth Century	60
1.16 Humour as a Device of Sympathy	61
1.17 Female Humour and Narrative Structure	65
1.18 Rhetoric of Humour in Pym's Novels	66
2 Some Tame Gazelle : Construction of Women's Veiled Humour	69
2.1 Role of Rhetorical Strategies in the Construction of Women's Humour in STG	70
2.1.1 Subversion of the Romantic Plot and the Discourse of Trivia	71
2.1.2 Belinda's Double Text Discourse	90
2.1.3 Function of Gossip in the Construction of Humorous Narrative	100
2.1.4 Understatement and Self-Deprecation	103

2.1.5 Sympathetic Bond between Narrator and Heroine and among Characters	111
2.2 Function of Themes and Motifs in the Construction of Humorous Plot	117
2.2.1 Subversion of Female Stereotypes	117
2.2.2 Subversion of Male Images	127
2.3 Women's Humour as Social Critique: Undermining the Institution of Church and Clergymen	134
3 Excellent Women : Humour of Mildred Regarded as an Excellent Woman	141
3.1 Rhetorical Strategies in the Construction of Women's Humour	142
3.1.1 Understatement and Self-deprecation	143
3.1.2 Mildred's Double-Voiced Discourse	152
3.2 Themes and Motifs in the Construction of Humorous Plot	161
3.2.1 Subversion of the Stereotype of Excellent Woman	161
3.2.2 Subversion of Male Images	176
4 Jane and Prudence : Unconventional Wife and Satisfied Spinster	181
4.1 Jane's Subversion of the Image of Conventional Clergyman's Wife	182
4.1.1 Jane's Creation of a Fantastic World	182
4.1.2 Jane's Reversal of the Serving Female	192
4.1.3 Jane's and Prudence's Use of Double-Voiced Discourse	194
4.2 Subversion of the Image of the Spinster and Prudence's Creation of a Romantic World	195
4.3 Subversion of the Male Image by Exposure of Men's Indolence and Self-Indulgence	202
Conclusion	209
Works Cited	215