

CONTENTS

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.....	11
INTRODUCTION.....	13
CHAPTER I: What is Productive Imagination? From Kant to Phenomenology	25
Introduction.....	25
Methodological Considerations.....	26
Kant on Productive Imagination	28
Productive Imagination in Post-Kantian Philosophy	31
Conclusion.....	35
CHAPTER II: What is Productive about Reproductive Imagination? Edmund Husserl’s Phenomenology of Phantasy and the Constitution of Cultural Worlds	37
Introduction.....	37
What is Reproduction and What is Reproductive Imagination?.....	41
Perception and Imagination.....	49
Memory and Phantasy.....	55
The Role of Phantasy in the Constitution of Cultural Worlds.....	61
Conclusion.....	69
CHAPTER III: Between Phenomenology, Pragmatism and Metaphysics: Max Scheler’s Concept of Productive Phantasy	75
Introduction.....	75
Scheler’s Critique of Pragmatism	76
Productive Phantasy and the Genesis of Experience.....	80

Sensation, Perception and Phantasy	84
The Psychic, Historical and Cultural Dimensions of Productive Phantasy.....	87
Phantasy and Desire.....	89
The Development of Productive Phantasy.....	91
The Limits of Productive Phantasy	93
Life, Spirit, and Productive Phantasy	98
Conclusion.....	101
CHAPTER IV: Between Phenomenology, Ontology and Philosophy of Culture: Productive Imagination and the Cassirer-Heidegger Disputation.....
Introduction.....	103
The Historical Setting.....	104
Productive Imagination and the Subjectivity of the Subject	108
The Copernican Turn	111
Terminus a Quo and Terminus ad Quem	115
Freedom	121
The Possibility of Reconciliation.....	123
Temporality	125
Conclusion.....	132
CHAPTER V: From Phenomenology to the Kyoto School: Miki Kiyoshi and the Logic of Imagination
Introduction.....	137
Miki as a Phenomenologist	140
The Standpoint of Contemplation and the Standpoint of Action	143

The Field of Imagination as the Field of Action	146
The Logic of the Imagination as the Logic of Collective Representations	148
The Logic of Imagination as the Logic of Symbols	153
The Logic of Imagination as the Logic of Forms	157
The Logic of Imagination as the Logic of Institutions	160
Conclusion	164
CHAPTER VI: From the Phenomenology of the Body to the Ontology of the Flesh: Maurice Merleau-Ponty and Embodied Imagination
Introduction.....	169
Merleau-Ponty’s Early Phenomenology of Imagination.....	170
Two Forms of the Imaginary in the Sorbonne Lectures (1949-1952)	179
Imagination and Perceptual Faith in The Lectures on Passivity (1954-1955)	186
Phenomenological Ontology and the Imaginary Texture of the Real in “Eye and Mind”	191
Conclusion	201
CHAPTER VII: From Phenomenology to Hermeneutics: Paul Ricoeur’s Philosophy of Productive Imagination
Introduction.....	203
The Paradox of Irrreality	204
Utopian and Constitutive Tendencies: Sartre, Castoriadis and Ricoeur	206
The Reproductive Model of Imagination	209
The Productive Model of Imagination.....	211

Pre-Predicative Imagination and the Genesis of Metaphors	218
The Paradox of Irreality Revisited.....	225
Conclusion	228
CHAPTER VIII: From Jean-Paul Sartre to Paul Ricœur:
Ricœur's Lectures on Imagination Revisited	231
Introduction.....	231
Where is Pierre? The Paradigm of Absence and Reproductive Imagination.....	233
Ricœur as Sartre's Follower and Adversary	236
At a Crossroads: Sartre and Ricœur Part Ways.....	241
Painting as a Form of Productive Imagination.....	243
Towards a Phenomenology of Productive Imagination	250
Conclusion	253
CHAPTER IX: Productive Imagination and Embodiment
Introduction.....	257
Productive Imagination and the Subjectivity of the Subject	259
Phenomenology of Embodied Subjectivity	261
Embodied Subjectivity and Imagination	266
Productive Imagination and Embodiment.....	268
Embodiment and Social Imaginaries	277
Phenomenology of Embodiment and Carnal Hermeneutics: A New Ground for the Philosophy of Imagination?	282
Conclusion	286
References	289
Index.....	303